

Jim Sherman

IU Bloomington, Professor Emeritus, Psychological and Brain Sciences

Remembering the Bryan Hall protest:

“There's a lot of stuff that's happened. Well, one of the earliest events that I think back on fondly was after I'd been here; it was probably the fall of 1969 and I came in August of '67. I got a call one morning from Henry Remack, who at the time, I think he was the dean of faculty. He was some sort of dean, I don't remember what, but I had met him a couple of occasions. This was 1969 and I came from Michigan. Ann Arbor was probably the -in the midwest there were three hotbeds of Vietnam protest and that was Ann Arbor, Madison, and Bloomington. So, you know, I had my beard and my long hair and Henry called me and said, "We need you to come over and help. The students have taken over Bryan Hall" I said, "Henry, what makes you think I'm not on their side?"”